

MOSCOW MOCKBA

99 Years Later

Seminarweek

The year 2017 marks the centenary of the Russian revolution – a formative event in the history of modernist art and architecture. It stands at the origins of contemporary political and intellectual life. Visiting Moscow almost a century later, we will search for the origins of our own principles, beliefs and ideas, examining how conflicted political and social histories shaped the city's urban fabric.

We will visit iconic early-modernist buildings by Konstantin Melnikov, Ilya Golosov, and Le Corbuiser, among others, and learn about their past and present. Our program will also include other, well and little-known historic and contemporary sites ranging from sixteenth-century cathedrals to a recent OMA museum renovation. We will meet local experts and historians, who will accompany us on our tours, and visit architectural museums and institutes. The trip is open for all, but participation is particularly recommended for students planning to enroll in the seminar 1917: the Architecture of the Russian Revolution.

October 24 - 29, 2016

Category B (251 - 500 CHF) excluding flight and visa costs
min. 12, max. 22 persons

Visiting Lectureship of the Theory of Architecture Dr. Alla Vronskaya

alla.vronskaya@gta.arch.ethz.ch torsten.lange@gta.arch.ethz.ch